Brandon Williams paints darkness with lush textures and intimate beauty as Chastity, whose brand new Peroxide 7" is out now via Captured Tracks. The new release includes the previously released single "Peroxide" along with the brand new track "Die From My Mind."

CLRVTNT premiered the new song today, calling it "a power-pop track that leans on everything from Teenage Fanclub to Hum." Referring to the new 7" Williams says "I know I'm most likely to write when I'm upset or when I am pissed. These songs have just come out more complex because I am hoping to work something better out for myself, to write a happier ending."

The FADER, which premiered the title track "Peroxide," write that "Through simple yet striking, reverberating piano chords, Williams' voice wavers as if on the edge of breaking. Still talk to God in your sleep, he sings, evoking the familiar hollow feeling we all experience after the loss of a loved one. Later, he declares solemnly over the crescendo of rumbling drums and the hum of violins, It's just peroxide / It's just the sunlight in your eyes."

Williams hails from Whitby, Ontario, a suburb whose spirit is well removed from the stirring city of Toronto. Chastity channels the feeling of youth on the fringe, focusing on the familiar and earnest connections found among the pent up suburban blue-collar. The genre bending music of Chastity hovers in a space oscillating between urgency, melody and noise - an artifact of youth culture that forms a bridge between isolation and collectivity.
